MA+ Architecture Works to Support Food Bank

Giving to others is part of the corporate culture of Oklahoma City's MA+ Architecture and this Christmas the company's generosity is focused on helping the Regional Food Bank, according to Gary Armbruster, AIA, a Principal and Architect for the firm.

The employees of the 42-year-old firm decided to hold a corporate food drive and donate the goods and cash raised to Central Oklahoma's Regional Food Bank.

"It's businesses like MA+ Architecture that take time and resources from their businesses to help the less fortunate that set the example," said Rodney Bivins, Director of the Food Bank.

"We're grateful for the work the Food Bank does and for the fact that we live in Oklahoma," said Armbruster. "We hope this donation will help some of our fellow Oklahomans in these challenging times."

"We're going to exhibit our donations with our "Buffaloes" and a sign encouraging others to remember the Food Bank," said Paul Meyer, AIA, Principal and Architect of the firm. "We'll also have a nativity scene to remind us all of the meaning of the season."

The "Buffaloes," whose theme is changed for each season, are replicas displayed in front of the company's offices at 4000 N. Classen.

MA +Architecture, a full service architectural, interior and planning firm formed in 1968, has received local, regional and national awards for excellence in design and specializes in educational, historic preservation, religious and governmental architecture. With headquarters in Oklahoma City, they serve clients throughout the state.
