Laura worked hard her entire life. For a time, she worked 20-hour days to support herself and her young daughter after they were abandoned by her husband. “When you are raising a child you do what you gotta do. You have to make ends meet.” Laura currently lives in subsidized senior housing, is on a fixed social security income. “The Food Bank really helps. It gives us the extra we need when we don’t have enough food, and we don’t have the money to go buy it. The Food Bank really helps us get through to the end of the month.”

Ray and his wife live in the Veterans Colony near Wilburton, OK. It is a beautiful, but remote area. Ray served in the army and his wife is now deployed in the Army National Guard. Like many of the veterans living in the Colony, Ray is unable to work and relies on disability income. “It gets pretty thin from check to check. We live out here in the middle of nowhere, it’s beautiful, but to get from one place to another it takes a lot of fuel. We spend a lot of our money on gas. The food is a tremendous help when you need a little extra to get you through.”
